

Royal Opera: la traviata: Trailer

[Audio: Operatic music from Giuseppe Verdi's la traviata plays in the background throughout the video]

The video starts with a performer in a white dress holding a fan as the text, 'Royal Ballet & Opera in cinemas' and 'Trafalgar Releasing', appears. With the text still displayed, the video cuts to a performer in a suit holding the hand of another in a white dress.

A further clip shows a performer wearing a black dress falling to the floor, ahead of cutting to a clip of a performer opening a set of double doors with the text, 'La traviata' displayed.

This is followed by a clip of a performer wearing a white dress and holding a champagne flute as they dance. Confetti falls as a series of performers wearing period outfits applaud around a central performer wearing a white dress dancing. Text appears reading, 'Live and love'.

Further clips include a performer wearing a suit turns to face left with other performers visible in the background, and a performer wearing a white dress and holding a fan as they look on with a smile.

The video cuts to a wide shot with two beds visible and a performer wearing a nightgown walking to the left of the stage. Text appears saying, 'to the last breath', as a shadow can be seen walking to the left of the stage's backdrop. The text remains as the video cuts to a performer wearing a dressing gown looking upset and crying.

A performer wearing a suit sings as they hold and then throw yellow petals to the floor. A series of quick cut clips follow including a wide shot of two performers interacting in front of a table with an ensemble standing behind; a close up of a performer wearing black singing and holding a fan; a performer wearing a brown winter coat acting angrily; and a performer readying a red cape.

Further clips follow including a performer in a suit throwing red petals to either side; someone walking over to another performer with concern as they lay on the floor; a performer in a white dress holding a piece of paper and towards another; and a performer wearing a nightgown holding both arms in the air.

An ensemble wearing black dresses dance ahead of a clip of a performer putting away a piece of red material. A performer falls into a chair upset holding a note.

Text appears saying, 'Live in cinemas. Wednesday 14 January 2026' with a wide shot in the background of a performer in a nightgown running with arms aloft into the arms of another as further cast watch on.

The screen cuts to a dark background as confetti falls and the following copy is displayed:

Royal Opera
La traviata
Wed 14 Jan 2026
Encores at selected cinemas

Book now

rbo.org.uk/cinema

The screen cuts to black and displays the Royal Ballet and Opera logo with the following text:

Royal Ballet & Opera
In Cinemas

END