

NT Live: Golden Boy trailer

[Audio: Josh O'Connor as Joe Bonaparte: Did you ever here them say, "You're just like dead if you ain't got a dollar"]

The video opens with a close-up shot of someone flicking on a lighter before cutting to text with a blurred subway train in the background.

[Audio: the screech of a subway train can be heard as tense, atmospheric choral music plays throughout the remainder of the trailer.]

[Text: The sold-out London play.]

It cuts to Joe Bonaparte, played by Josh O'Connor, observing the lighter's flame, ahead of a wider shot of Joe as he moves from side-to-side.

[Audio: Joe: Tomorrow's my birthday. Everything moves too quickly...]

[Text: Comes to cinemas worldwide.]

[Audio: Joe: ...life goes by at 200 miles per hour,]

The video cuts to a clip of a man standing on a stage.

[Audio: Joe: ...and you want me to wait for the future?]

[Text: five-star, Sunday Times; five-star, British Theatre Guide; four-star, the Telegraph; four-star, Whatsonstage; four star, The Stage; four-star, The Independent; four-star, The Metro; four-star, Time Out.]

[Audio: Joe: It might never come!]

A shadow of Joe's open hand can be seen as it closes into a fist.

The video cuts to Joe holding money in his hands.

[Audio: Joe: I want to live, and in this country, that means money]

Joe can be seen head bowed to the floor as the camera pans to another angle of the same shot. The camera pans down to show Joe's hands as he closes them into a fist.

[Audio: Joe: "You're just like dead, if you ain't got a dollar"]

[Text: Golden Globe winner Josh O'Connor]

The video cuts to a close-up of Joe's face.

[Audio: Joe: Tomorrow's my birthday.]

The video cuts back to Joe observing the lighter's flame again before closing it abruptly.

[Audio: Joe: I change my life.]

[Audio: the noise of the subway can be heard in the background ahead of a click which cuts the video to silence]

[Text: Golden Boy by Clifford Odets. Directed by Sam Yates. A Production from Almeida Theatre.]

[Text: National Theatre Live. Funded by UK Government. Arts Council England. Sky Arts.]

ENDS